SEKOU (TOUR GUIDE): spot light

Welcome aboard, folks! Buckle in, sit back, and keep those phones ready, cause we're about to roll through the one and only, Hollywood! (DJ cue: "Hollywood swinging")

Now I know some of y'all flew in from halfway across the planet just for this moment, and let me tell you, you're not alone. Every year, millions come to the City of Angels with stars in their eyes. Some chasing fame, others chasing the sun, and a few just trying to find themselves.

Take a look to your right, there it is! The world-famous Hollywood Sign. It's welcomed everyone from Humphrey Bogart to Harry Belafonte, it's seen everything from silent films to Sinners, and it's still watching over a new generation trying to leave their mark on this city.

Just ahead we have Hollywood Boulevard. Home of the Walk of Fame. Every one of those stars embedded in the sidewalk? A dream that came true. There's TCL Chinese Theatre, once known as Grauman's, where legends dipped their hands in wet cement and told the world: I was here.

You'll see the Capitol Records Building, rising like a stack of vinyls, and the Dolby Theatre, where the Oscars are held each year. There's glitz, there's glam, but not all that glitters is gold under this California sun.

For Derrick: Music makes a transition to something more mellow here. BAND.

Folks, on this tour, I want you to look deeper.

Yeah, past the billboards and the tour buses. Look over there. See that fruit vendor on the corner? Look at his weathered hands. They've been working this same block longer than some of these influencers have been alive.

Catch the smile behind that stranger's eyes on the sidewalk. Maybe she's heading to her third audition of the day, questioning herself.... Maybe she's writing a screenplay on napkins between shifts.

Look deeper, Folks. Past the pavement, past the glamour, down into the very soil.

What do you think's down there? Dust? Sure. But also... stories. Sweat. Hope. Struggle. Memory.

Los Angeles as we know it didn't just land here out of nowhere. It grew. It blossomed from this soil.

Folks, the real Los Angeles?
It's not just in front of you.
It's beneath you.
Rooted in the land.

And the land remembers us.

ACTOR 1:

If I awaken in Los Angeles
I will find a crazy boy teetering there on the sidewalk against morning traffic, too far gone to even ask for a quarter.
I will hear his mother call for him, her spirit confused by the taste of sadness,
and though she searches for him everywhere,
she will never find him here.

ACTOR 2:

And if I awaken in Los Angeles
I will hear the lost beloved one sing Billie Holiday in my ear-- she lives in a parallel universe, is kind to rats and does no harm to anyone.

ACTOR 3:

And if I awaken in Los Angeles I will know that I am not the only dreamer.
I will appear in the vision of a dove who perches on the balcony of the apartment.
In his translation I am the human with a store of birdseed. He is the sun.
I am a fruitful planet.

ACTOR 4:

And if I awaken in Los Angeles
I will not have to get up and say my prayers to the east, and look out over the city of millions, past the heads of palm trees, through foggy breezes-- because I will be a prayer as I perform the rituals of being a human.
There will be no difference between near and far.

SEKOU (TOUR GUIDE): spot light

Alright folks! We're headed to Boyle Heights, home of El Mercadito. But first, we're passing through one of the most iconic intersections, San Vicente & La Cienaga. (He struggles to pronounce the names)

Jasmine Minchez comes on stage, correcting him. Although real points are being made here, this should feel light-hearted and humorous.

JASMINE: spot light

You mean you're taking them to El Mercadito?

DJ Music - Gasolina - Daddy Yankee

And by the way, this is San Vicente and La Cienaga. How are you an Angeleno and don't know that?

SEKOU (TOUR GUIDE): spot light

You'll have to forgive me, I don't speak Spanish.

JASMINE: spot light

But you do, you live in Los Angeles. You can't live here and not speak Spanish. If you walk this land, you should get to know its history and the language it sprouted from.

SEKOU (TOUR GUIDE): spot light

Alright, alright. (nervous laughter) Folks, we have arrived at these adorable marketplaces called tiangas.

JASMINE: spot light

Tianguis! Here, let me take you to my LA.

SEKOU exits

VideoLive Music - Elena's flute or Singular instrument voice.

There's a 7-Eleven on Osborne that we'd walk to A sacred space of after-school ritual
Red polo shirts peeking under black hoodies
Even when it was nearing 90 in September

It was remodeled last year the old building now just a shadow of the new one the old ungrazed lot now a parking lot the muscle cars do donuts in

Now 7-11 charges $1.49 for Arizona Green Tea Nostalgic for when it was '99 cents'
I remember that like lashes so big
The girls could fly away from silly boys
Like these Red Bulls gave us wiiiings

Eyeliners so sharp it cut class
Blinding highlight on the tip of the nose, the cupid's bow
And inner corners is the holy doctrine

I know this place down every aisle
I mapped the bus routes on my arm veins
First good morning given to the tamale lady at Mariachi Square

I kept hearing how girls need to speak up, so now
I talk about how I deserve a serenade down Slauson
I want a procession of Priuses and paleteros
I want it to start where Alvarado marries Glendale
I want Vicente to be blasting down Van Nuys Blvd
Until it spills into Reseda and Sylmar

If you want me to fall in love
Give me the rush of a Dodger's World Series win Tell me what your favorite freeway is I'll tell you mine is this specific section of the 210
Where the hills wrap both sides like sleeping giants
At night, I drive fast so I don't wake them

My city, my Los Angeles
Coming-of-age here is the dream my parents cultivated My mami crossing two countries with my brother Wrapped tightly in her promises
My papi, a pillar, even though they too were just kids
Like the ones walking home from 7-Eleven

I'm a poem in motion, a protest in lip gloss,
a lineage that refused to disappear

Music ends here

I love L.A. 'cause it doesn't just look like me
It talks like me
Like everyone I love
We sprouted from the soil
And the soil remembers
Us

LUIS: enters and joins Jas - second spot she remains and sits down stage center

Los Angeles is a tianguis, a marvelous marketplace, where people from everywhere exchange flavors, food, and flowers:
items as well as ideas.
Where poetry blossoms in the sacred spaces called marketplaces, which should always be centered by the four elements: air, water, earth, and fire, where the timebound meets the timeless, the sacred meets the profane, where things are not just transactional,

but relational,
and ultimately transformational.

Tianguis is a Nahuatl word for open-air markets that dotted Mexican and Central American villages and cities in the pre-conquest.

People arrived from the wilderness of their lives to the order of their civic societies.

It's exchange as sharing, not profiting, but a holy act of enriching everyone with a soundtrack of ranchos and milpascanyons and deserts, volcanos and jungles.

Chicano Culture music plays. Mariachi, but still Santana in spirit.
More soulful in spirit.

(MAYBE DANCERS COME OUT HERE?)

Los Angeles is a tianguis, not as private property or corporate markets, but human interaction of essentials, where wisdom, song, and teachings go with the tamales and created artifacts.
Where gold and silver only mattered when it was shaped.
The creation gave them value, not the substance.
Los Angeles is a tianguis, where art is alive on the walls

on skin and cars

Alive in our hearts and our voices.

Where creativity is heritage and legacy.

In Los Angeles you hear this in musicians born here: Ritchie Valens, The Doors, War,

Charles Wright & the Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band, Hiroshima, Motley Crue, Los Lobos, and Quetzal.

Los Angeles is a tianguis, where lowriding is where cars become moving museums, and hydraulic lifts make metal and glass hippity-hop while painted Goddesses spirit cars into a new kind of heaven and the bass-heavy sounds inside them turn you around

Los Angeles is a tianguis

where the Spanish speaking have inflections from la ciudad de Mexico, Puebla, Jalisco, Zacatecas...

but also El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras...

and idioms such as Mixteco, Zapoteco, Yoeme, Raramuri, Pipil, and Ki'che Maya, joining with the Tongva, Tataviam, Chumash, and original peoples from across the vast expanse of this land.

Los Angeles is a tianguis

of tongues, sharp and mostly sweet, but be careful of the maldiciones, the curses—we're good at those too.

And don't forget la chancleta, a mother's weapon of choice, with aerodynamic sharpness and laser-focused accuracy, better than the highest-tech drones.

Here we are not "Hispanics" or "Latinos," but Chicanx, cis and queer, gendered and trans, he, she, they, them, and we.
Where we celebrate Mexico—desde los charros hasta los jarochos, but also, the Guanacos, Chapines, and Catrachos that are now integral to our barrios and our families where a Wepa Cumbia shares sounds with an oldies rola and where the Indigenous, Black, white, and Asian hold hands, share traditions and the land, as Mexica huehuetl drums gather energies to start a day, a year, a life.

We are Los Angeles:
the meeting place,
the holding place,
the dreaming place.
A tianguis for all to belong to flower from the soil
From the land
The land remembers us

SEKOU (TOUR GUIDE): single spot

Folks, if your mouth's still on fire from that last taco stand, just know... you're not alone.

But if you think that's the top of the Scoville scale, buckle up. Because the next five towns? They're bringing the heat.

We're about to take a deep dive into L.A.'s international spice rack...

DANTE, JASON & ARIANA: rush the stage two spots on the three of them they will share the light. When one has the lead they will be in the single spot and the other one will share the other spot

DANTE: K-town

JASON: Thai Town

DANTE: Historic

ALL: Filipino - town.

JASON: Listen to our sights

DANTE: our sounds

ARIANA: get loud!

ALL: Let me take you 'round to our side of the ground

JASON: Chinatown! Firecracker-poppin'-off, from the run to the jazz club

DANTE: (it's grand!)

JASON: Elders draggin' carts, collectin' cans, their hands built these streets Standin in Central Plaza, under the shadow of Bruce Lee,

ARIANA: strawberry cake at Phoenix forever smellin' like a birthday—

JASON: Roast duck skin glisten in the window at Hop Woo
No matter how late, we slide through to cop food Celebratin' our wins

DANTE: or at least our survival

JASON: been adaptin' since our arrival
You know this wasn't originally Chinatown?

ARIANA: (Damn!)

JASON: It was in downtown, in the heart of calle de los negros,
“The largest recorded lynching in California history” - couldn't keep us down

DANTE: Pushed out,

JASON: we pushed back,

ARIANA: kept it movin

JASON: no slack
Regrouped in Little Italy, buildin a new community in the midst of our city
In COVID, the service center provided masks for the kiddies

DANTE: Home to East West Bank

ARIANA: and wine braised pork shank

JASON: Anna May

DANTE: and Tyrus

JASON: Wong - and we still got it goin on in

ARIANA: get loud!

ALL: Let me take you 'round to our side of the ground

...Little Tokyo!

Taiko drums pound like the pads of a hundred pairs of feet

Dancin' outside the JACCC

Or the Homba Hongwanji

Summer festival nights, uncles in the beer garden,

Nieces playin' games, hopin to win prizes

Rhythms established for a hundred years of life,

Stories echo in the streets from East West Players on Tuesday Nights

From Nisei week to the obon, Little Tokyo rolls on,

Rose up from workers, gardeners, and soldiers

See 1st and Central where the buses came to take them to the desert

Now a Museum and a monument preserve their memories as a treasure

The ones who went - the ones who fought - the ones who returned to build it strong

Now their legacy goes on, hoopin at the Terasaki Budokan

Come any weekend to the Plaza and you're liable to see

Kimonos coloring the street, from anime fans to Nikkei grandmas,

Bearin culture or seekin it out, LT stands for generations of authenticity

So any day of the week you can see that we got it goin on in

Los Angeles, five towns,

Let me break it down

Chinatown

J-town

K-town

Thai Town

Historic, Filipino - town.

Listen to our sights, our sounds - get loud!

Let me take you 'round to our side of the ground

...Koreatown!

Yo, everybody know, Koreans run LA!
Now we on 6th & St. Andrews Place
The streets where the K-town Kowboys run
Where everybody meets and everybody having fun
Kiss Kiss Bang Bang Apt 503
The Normandie Club, Lock & Key
Startin on that soju
But we all end up the Tofu House BCD
But like everything else in LA
It's more than what you see
And its built on the back of the community
Always got each other's back
Always help each other stack
It's the fashion, the food
It's the style, it's the culture
Got the whole world buzzin
Everybody got notice

Los Angeles, five towns,
Let me break it down
Chinatown
J-town
K-town
Thai Town
Historic, Filipino - town.
Listen to our sights, our sounds - get loud!
Let me take you 'round to our side of the ground

...Filipinotown
Through the Gateway
Rolling down Temple Street
Now we in "Hi-Fi" where the Filipino's meet Where the Filipino's eat - Filipino meat, bro!
Street food, Dollar Hits Park's Finest BBQ
But don't act like this is something new
We been here since before the 1950's

Those of us that didn't end up in the fields wound up here in the city Where Filipinos and Mexicans actually get along Unions formed
Ceasar Chavez and Larry Itliong
Now the monuments and murals decorate
The walls and buildings to celebrate
The Manongs
And the community stays strong SIPA always searching to involve
From Sunday Jump to Palms Up
Cause the history runs deep
Now every May
We shut down the streets
For the
Baryo HiFi Festival
And everybody's welcomed in...

...Thaitown

I swear
That spice thick in the air
Like humidity in Bangkok
Feelin like we back in Thailand
First Sunday every April they be celebrating Songkran
This is East Hollywood... Blvd and Western When you see
The neon lights that read
Thailand Plaza
Then you know you've arrived
And you like most people may have come for a bite
But tread lightly
When they ask you:

how spicy?
Spicy!
Thai spicy?
No, no....
More than Siracha, shout out to Jitlada
See the cuisine's
Gone mainstream

Becoming part of the fabric of Los Angeles
But the food is just entry level to the culture
You have dig further
To understand the relationship between Thais and Americans
Go back to the days when Abraham Lincoln was president And the King of Siam wished to support him
In the Civil War and offered to send elephants
And it's only fitting Thaitown is in Hollywood
Be it the Eastside...
Cause Hollywood already made a movie celebrating Thailand
"The King & I"...

...Five towns, that's the OGs
Recognized officially - canonized in our history
The heart where it all started
Spreadin out with every beat of our cultures,
See we went from the City to the County
Shouts to Little Saigon and OC
Cerritos, the whole South Bay and the SGV Waves of Asian immigration, whom bombs and politics displaced,
Found these new places to serve as foundations for future generations,
From the donut shop / to liquor store / to nail salon
The entrepreneurs, Asian moms & pops, built them up Panda Express to Huy Fong-Fast & Furious? That was us!
We ain't more LA - but we are LA -
From the streets to our style, man, we shout LA
From ancestors who paved the way-to the youth that's here today-
Each enclave and hood can say that we love LA

Los Angeles, five towns,
Let me break it down
Chinatown
J-town
K-town
Thai Town
Historic, Filipino - town.

SEKOU (TOUR GUIDE): single spot

Alright folks, we are halfway through the tour. We'll take a 15 minute break so feel free to walk around and pick up souvenirs. Anyone know where we're headed next?

I'll give you a hint...we're visiting the part of town you really came for. Randy's anyone? And I hope you saved some space for Mac & cheese from Dulan's.

I'll meet you back at the bus in 15.

Welcome back, to the City of Angels!

Where we got equal angles
The hood an isosceles
Half light/Half dark Gangstas spit wisdom
like Socrates

Guitar comes in

The West's influence make the world go round
So many diamonds in the rough Just waitin to be found but listen, it seems I have your ear for a while So let me tell you how our culture made this town

Leadbelly vibes on guitar

In 1865, The 13th Amendment freed the slaves Jim Crow laws made it hard to get paid made it hard to be human
A country full of promise, but it felt like ruin Rejecting the South's limitation
6 million freemen and women set off on The Great Migration forced to leave their fields
And abandon their roots
They dreamed an American dream (pause)
And had faith it'd come true
They landed in Chicago, Philly, New York City
Detroit, Cleveland and the Wild, Wild West Felt that Coastal Breeze
(I AM ALIVE IN LOS ANGELES)
Is this how it feels to be free?
(I AM ALIVE IN LOS ANGELES)
No more chains holdin me
(I AM ALIVE IN LOS ANGELES)

In the 1920s, South Central was singin

Video. Jazzy music, trumpet (Jazz Era, Duke/tin pan alley/tradition 125th street Renaissance dance) Dance?

Jazz notes jumped down Central Ave
Everybody was swingin
Duke Ellington played at Dunbar
And Jack's Basket Room, too
Charlie Parker, Erroll Garner
All rhythm, no blues
It's said that jazz was birthed from the Sun itself
Made Black folks dance like they didn't know space or time

Music stops

Like they weren't denied bank loans
Or boxed in by red lines

60 years later,
They presented the breaks

DJ record scratch (DJ note: These are the Breaks...then, Straight Outta Compton instrumental break,)

Put a beat to their pain
Birthed hip-hop from heartache
World Class Wreckin Cru played at Eve's After Dark
A rage boiled beneath the surface
All it needed was a spark & yeah, this city knows fire
From the Watts Rebellions to the 92 riots
Systemic brutality gave rise to niggas w/ attitude
Comin Straight Outta Compton with a chip on their shoulder
Tryna make it in America feel like Sisyphus pushin' boulders

Music stops

But like Maya, still we rise
Still we make art out of our demise Still we offer beauty when we were handed none
Still our hearts beat like an ancestral drum...

Live Music: Congo drums

Feel the rhythm of Leimert?
The Village
The People
Sika, your spirit is eternal
It's here we find refuge when the block grew hotter than infernos Sankofa symbols cover the pavement
"Go back and get it"
The knowledge of our ancestors
Unity, self-determination, collective work and responsibility, cooperative economics, purpose, creativity last but not least, we can't forget Faith Embodiment of these principles is how we advance our race

Congo Drums Out. with CONVICTION, for "Race?..."

ELIZE:

Race? Did somebody say race?

The fastest woman in the world lived right here
In Jordan Downs

Brought that Olympic Gold home
Our queen rocked her crown
Flo...Jo
Flo...Jo
Showed all the Watts babies what's possible
Betye Saar painted stars and moons
A reminder to her descendants: you illuminate rooms
You can be what you wanna be Your environment can't limit you
You hear that Compton?
Don't let anyone's narrative define you
And if you ever lost
And need a map to find you
Just look at the ones who came before:

Live Music: Keyboard will continue to play piano moment of "PJ's song"...

South Central
The land which beneath are burdens buried by those who came before me
With that in mind,
I walk with my head high, chest raised, fearless - except for when God picks up the line I stand besides warriors who rest their rifles for reading time
Trade AK's for W9's
And let go of grenades and waved sage
Because love defies all negativity
And these thoughts are powerful in proportions;

Like hugs,
and daps,
and verses and scriptures
And ginger
and oxtails for dinner
And ciphers on Friday
And Drum circles on Sunday
And we all sat around and listened to the Griot Tell stories of strong people
Black as obsidian
With Light like Gold, shining
Never knew chains and whips
Only soils and oils and herbs
And toiled with roots and truth
Of stars and the sun
And when I drink water
I get a refreshing reminder that the land is sacred
And these secrets flow through me with ease
So when you see me
Know that's why I say what I say how I say it when It was spoken to me
This, thus,
South Central Gospel

Piano music stops after aural cue "South Central Gospel"

SEKOU (TOUR GUIDE):

Just when you thought DEI was over...

(DJ Playing medley of CA songs)

(throat singing moment with Lev & Sekou)

LEV (w/own guitar):

There was a moment in time
The birth of the American folk movement
No band
Just one man and his banjo
Give Pete Seeger a hammer
And we will all sing
All over this land
Just 2 chords and the truth
A story that needs to be told

Video

Or a protest in a song
Which side are you on boys? Which side are you on? (sung)
Before Neil was an old man Joni found California the Eagles booked a room and never left the past Jim opened the doors to his home and Judy's blue eyes caught a glimpse of Crosby stills and Nash
There was a moment in time
They were all there
To be a fly in the canyons cliff
To feel the energies align
Of collaboration, Of new beginnings
There was a moment in time

SUNG:

Folk Is a seed

that keeps on spreading

No matter how the wind turns

Folk Is the torch

that keeps on passing

No matter how many times it burns

Folk is a Lesson

That keeps on teaching

no matter how it's learned

Folk is an echo

That keeps on singing

no matter how many times its heard

no matter how many times its heard

There was a moment in time

The conversations at Canter's deli over a slice of Bye Bye Miss American pie (Bye Bye sung)

To the stage of the Troubador to honor the day the music died (was alive)

In the grooves of the record

There was a moment in time

Where you went to discover a record at tower records or the local country store come home, Put the record on

Sit on the floor with your friends

And stay there listening to the whole record smoking a joint until the record ends

(crazy guitar solo) Guitar from band to assist in psychedelic guitar

Psychedelic images

My parents were very strange

I wasn't there then but I can still be here now

Leary and Alpert Tuned in, turned on, and dropped out

The 2 pioneers in a new frontier

One kept going down the rabbit hole

The other found a guru to never come down

The bottled up repression of an entire generation opened them exploded into an era or creation

Could the Harvard psychedelic club give birth to the summer of love without the drugs?

The psychedelic experience and thousand year old rituals were once again new Sending Professors and hippies alike on a pilgrimage to seek truth

An introduction to spiritual practice and eastern philosophies was unknown

Revealing the countless lost souls

All walking each other home

Conclusion

There was a moment in time

The hillbilly ballads, the gospel, the blues

They all came through the Ash Grove,

Folk, Black and White and when Ed Pearl dimmed the lights

The roots of American music came to life

There was a moment in time

The Beach Boys, Surf rock, and the British Invasion

The inevitable end to the endless summer vacation

Times were a changin', just as fast as they came (sung)

Quickly but surely,

Manson took the innocence planting the seed of worry from psychedelics to speed..., leaving artists wondering

How the world went and got itself in such a big damn hurry

Protests grew louder and voice grew higher

Baritone Elvis and Cash, Left on the past

When the metal balloon caught fire with skin tight leather pants

And the belting falsetto of Robert Plant

The lingering optimism of the hippies in the 60s

Left open minds undefended to the susceptibilities of the 70's

Lending itself to a collective hangover of political turmoil, counter culture clashes, and the war without an ending

And just like that,

End of Psychedelic images (move to video)

Micro doses replaced macro doses and the actual journey

Woke folk, in their shamanic chic, third eye shade, burner brims and coachella crowns

The folk lost folk but folk found itself at a revival

It was all left behind

With only the songs that serve to remind

There was a moment in time

SUNG:

Folk Is a seed

that keeps on spreading

No matter how the wind turns

that keeps on passing

No matter how many times it burns

Folk is a Lesson

That keeps on teaching

No matter how it's learned

Folk is an echo

That keeps on singing

no matter how its heard

Singing together is the only medicine

For the pain of one human voice

SAMMY:

The Chumash called it Topanga

The “Place above”

And the words they Sang

Cover this soil

Like Ash that Rained down

From Flames above

Privileged or not

Grief and pain

are coming for everyone

Let the story ring out

Like an endless prayer

Lost souls

Remind us of the nomadic danger

When we Lose our way

We forget our neighbor

Growing faceless to ourself

We become a stranger

Praying one day

someday later

We will Return to nature to the land

The land remembers us

SAGE BURNING AGAIN?

Folks,

Today, you didn't just see Los Angeles.

You felt it.

You heard its heartbeat in different dialects all saying the same thing: You belong here.

This is what makes Los Angeles beautiful.

Not just the palm trees or sunny skies.

It's us.

The people.

We are what makes L.A. irresistible.

We are who people from all over the world come to see, even if they don't know it.

So when you think back on today, I hope you don't just remember the landmarks.

I hope you remember the faces.

The flavors.

The voices.

Because that's Los Angeles.

It isn't one thing.

It's everything.

And now that you've seen it for yourself...

Well, you're a part of it too.

From the land

The land remembers us
